Four New Bridgeheads Are Established Across Saar River

great bid to gouge a hole deep into Germany's industrial heart, immobilize the Saar and pave the way for similar treatment of the Ruhr valley to the north.

By refusing to surrender Saarbrücken or spare it by declaring it an open city, the Germans seem destined to lose one of their most historic possessions.

First Moves Up

In the sector east of Aachen, new American First Army units moved up to within striking distance of the Roer river and the Ninth Army broke up a German counter-attack in the area of Lucherberg, a town sold dearly by the Nazis because it controls the Adolf Hitler autobahn, the six-lane concrete highway leading into Cologne.

Troops of the United States Seventh Army consolidated their hold on Selsat between Colmar and Strasbourg after a bold-out German garrison in Fort Mützgen finally capitulated.

The last vestiges of German resistance were mopped up in captured Ravenna on the Italian front, with native patriot forces cooperating with the British Eighth Army in removing final traces of Nazi occupation and oppression. Prisoners taken in the Ravenna drive gave evidence that the Germans had been taken by surprise by a British encircling movement that resulted in the city's seizure and there were indications the enemy retreat to the north was a disorganized one.

Planes of the Mediterranean air force again were extremely active in supporting the Allied ground advances, pounding constantly at German troops concentrations and communication lines.

The current air offensive from British bases against Germany's synthetic oil plants and railway lines reached a new peak, with huge fleets of daylight bombers following British night raiders in a sweeping series of attacks which engulfed half a dozen key centers of the Reich.

Berlin reported that the long-awaited all-out Soviet offensive against the Hungarian capital of Budapest had begun. This was not confirmed by Moscow, which merely reported new Russian advances between Lake Balaton and the Drava river which cost the Nazis 2,000 dead and 750 captured.

Sources in Bern, Switzerland, reported without confirmation that advance Soviet units had reached the Austrian frontier, although previous official dispatches placed them still 50 miles away.

OHIO BOY FIGHTS IN GREECE

25 CONVICTS IN REVOLT IN ATLANTA PRISON

ATLANTA, GA., Dec. 6.—James V. Bennett, federal director of prisons, revealed today that the approximately 25 convicts at the federal penitentiary in Atlanta who staged a revolt were still refusing to heed all appeals for surrender.

The men, with four guards as hostages, remained in complete control of the five story segregation building at the prison. Although the felons were reported to be without firearms, persons familiar with the prison pointed out that a prison barber shop is in the segregation building and that convicts have access to razors, knives, scissors and other such instruments.

Early today two truck loads of soldiers arrived at the prison but Bennett said they would not be used to put down the revolt. He said they arrived for their usual weekly target practice on the prison grounds.

Bennett said as yet no force has been used either by prison officials or the convicts and declared that no one had been injured.

One report said the revolt started Monday night, but prison officials declined to confirm this. Bennett was visiting the penitentiary when the revolt occurred.

already made clear that they have given up hope of victory before Jan. 1 and many believe this means V-E day will not come before Spring.

Contrarily, weather conditions in the Pacific area are almost entirely favorable during the coming months. This should aid aerial operations against Tokyo and other Jap held positions. It is emphasized in most quarters that the raids on the Jap mainland are primarily aimed at knocking out Japanese industries vital to the war effort.

Simultaneously U. S. naval and air forces are maintaining a high pace of destruction of Jap shipping with submarines alone accounting for better than one Jap cargo ship a day. All these activities are designed to strangle Japan's war potential.

These operations can go on all winter and, with U. S. military might growing both on land sea, there is every reason to believe that the coming month will be used to make sensational advances, particularly after the Philippines have been cleaned up.

The favorable quality of fighting weather in the Far East can best be appreciated when it is realized that it was just three years ago that Japan started her all out offensive against the Allies. From Pearl Harbor her mighty onslaught carried her thousands of miles from home along the very fronts on which she is now threatened by a stronger foe.

With a view to reducing the duration of the war on all fronts, it is believed unlikely that United Nations leaders will let this winter go without recovering as much of that lost area as possible and avenging that series of defeats.

BRICKER AND LAUSCHE HOLD JOINT MEETING

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6.—Governor Bricker and Governor-Elect Frank J. Lausche sat down together for the first time today to discuss the state's reversion plans with the State Postwar Program Commission.

The Commission, headed by Lieut. Gov. Paul M. Herbert, met at luncheon to present its preliminary recommendations to Lausche as governor-elect, while Bricker will explain the steps which have already been taken by the various state departments.

The governor said that he already had asked most of the department heads to include their preliminary recommendations to Lausche as governor-elect, while Bricker will explain the steps which have already been taken by the various state departments.

To the People of this Community

Here's straight talk by an industrial editor to his fellow workers. It is worth your listening to and thinking about tonight after you get through reading the war news.

"It may seem a long way from a foxhole in the Pacific to a cottage in the suburbs, but they're not as far apart as you might think."

"To the boy who looks to his foxhole for protection against a deadly enemy, that foxhole is security."

"To us who stay at home and fight the battle as civilians, the cottage in the suburbs is the security we look forward to when the world is again at peace."

"When the noise of battle dies, when men and women across the world renew their peacetime pursuits, those of us who have invested in War Bonds can step immediately into the future we planned."

"So the foxhole and the cottage in the suburbs aren't so far apart, after all. Different as they seem, they have one common denominator—War Bonds. Extra bonds will move our boys out of the foxholes sooner."

THE EDITOR.

WENDELL WILLKIE LEAVES ENTIRE ESTATE TO WIFE

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The will of Wendell L. Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential nominee, on file today in surrogate's court, leaves his estate of "more than $20,000" in trust for his wife, Edith Willkie.

The will makes provision for whatever income from the estate is required by Mrs. Willkie and her son, Navy Lieut. Philip H. Willkie, 24, for their maintenance.

Willkie, who died last October 8, had named the Ohio State Bank and Trust company of Akron as executor and trustee, but the bank has renounced the appointment in favor of Mrs. Willkie, who has asked the surrogate's court to name her administratrix.

AMERICAN TROOP PAYROLL STOLEN IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The theft of a $280,000 payroll destined for American troops on the Western front was reported today by the London Daily Herald.

The large sum of money, consisting of small notes sealed in steel boxes, was stolen while in transit in England, the newspaper said.

American military headquarters said it had no information but U. S. military police were quoted as saying that the money had been stolen although no details could be given about it.

American police now are engaged in trying to solve how and when the robbery occurred. Police and Federal Bureau of Investigation men were reported carrying out a widespread hunt through towns in southwest England. One ship was said to have been held up in port while inquiries were made.

STRAIGHT TALK ABOUT THE

SIXTH WAR LOAN DRIVE

AS WE MOVE closer to victory, it wouldn't be surprising if you were saying to yourself—"What's the big idea of asking for all this additional money now? Isn't the war almost over?"

No sir, it is not! Not by a long shot. Of course, for many months now you've heard mostly about the war with Germany, where our greatest effort is concentrated. That's why many people have the idea that the war's practically over.

But make no mistake about it—nothing could be farther from the truth! The Japanese war is a tremendous undertaking, and victory will come high. We'll have to fight every inch of the way.

Everything Costs More—in the Pacific War

The European war is expensive, but almost everything in the Pacific war will cost more. Take transport costs, for instance: Because of the longer distances, the same amount of freight costs 25 per cent more when shipped to the South Pacific than to Europe. And it takes twice as many cargo ships in the Pacific to support a task force of a given size because turn-around time is twice as great!

More Planes . . . Tanks . . . Ships . . . Oil

In addition, we shall need more of everything. More B-29 Superfortresses that cost $600,000 each. More P-47 Thunderbolts that cost $50,000 each. More M-4 Tanks, with bulldozer blades, that cost $67,417 each. More amphibious tanks —more aircraft carriers—more supply ships—more gasoline and oil than it took for the invasion of Europe!

Care for the Sick and Wounded

And lest anyone forget, we shall need more battalion aid stations—more clearing stations—more evacuation hospitals—more convalescent hospitals—more hospital ships.

For many, many years the sick, wounded, and otherwise disabled veterans will require medical attention and care. That's the least Uncle Sam can do in appreciation of what they've done for us.

Maintenance for Millions

Did you ever stop to think how much money it costs to maintain the 11 to 12 million men and women in our army and navy? Whether the men are actually fighting or not, they must be fed, housed, transported from one training center or battle area to another, cared for in a hundred and one different ways. That all costs money and will continue to until the last man demobilized is back in civilian clothes.

In addition, millions of dollars will be required for mustering-out pay, for various benefits and services voted by Congress to help the boys get started in civilian life.

These are reasons enough why patriotic Americans will want to buy heavily during the Sixth War Loan. But here are still more—

Winning the Peace—for Your Country

If we're to win the peace as well as the war, the cost of living must be kept down and the purchasing power of money preserved. A reckless inflation that would necessarily be followed by the catastrophe of deflation—with its unemployment, bankruptcies, misery and heartache—must be prevented at all cost.

Let's make no mistake—a dangerous period lies ahead. The American people have nothing to fear, however, if they show in the future the same common sense they have shown in the past, and continue to put every penny over rock-bottom expenses into the purchase of more and more War Bonds.

Winning the Peace—for Yourself

Want another important reason? Yourself! There isn't a better or safer investment in the world today than War Bonds. In helping your country, you are also helping yourself! Never in our entire history has it been so necessary to save as right now. We'll need money, individually, for education, repairs, replacements, retirement—and we'll need a lot of it.

As you can see there are many reasons, important reasons, why our Government must have the financial support of everyone, and have it for many months to come.

Let all Americans do their part—for their own sake, for their country's.

LIBERTY WITH DISCIPLINE

AS the exiled governments of Europe return, one by one, to their liberated countries, the watching world begins to see a definite, almost stereotyped pattern of action emerge. At first the administrators are greeted with a fervor which expresses the joy of a self-respecting people once more free to govern themselves. Then, as they begin to exert the authority necessary to bring about order, they come into conflict with groups whose whole life for years has been one of violence necessary to drive out what authority existed—that of the Nazi conqueror. These groups are now, naturally enough, conditioned to resent any attempts at discipline imposed from above, and rebel. It is then up to the government in question, by a combination of strength, wisdom and tact, to solve the problem, or relegate its people to a chaos of unrest and civil war.

The government of Premier Pierlot in Belgium, latest to be attacked in this way, is now strengthening its stand for "liberty with discipline." The premier received an ovation in Parliament recently when he stated, urging a grant of special power to deal with the situation:

"These methods are not new. They have been taken before for similar ends—the attaining of power by illegal means. I know that the day will come when we shall go—but not now and not like that."

WHO'S TOUGH NOW?

THE Germans have long bragged of their toughness, especially in this war, and professed to regard their British, French and American foes as weaklings. They have also been proud of their historic defenses, especially the famous fortress city of Belfort, in southern France near the Swiss border. So every little while they get a rude shock.

It was so at Belfort, which had been a powerful and trustworthy defense for 300 years. But an old American saying proved true again: "The bigger they are, the harder they fall." And to the honor of newly restored France, it was mainly the French that did it. That honor was reserved for them, and there was glory enough for all.

Incidentally, two notable facts were observed. First, the French divisions were spread over so large an area that the German commander opposing them thought they would not be able to get into action. Second, the Allies launched their attack in such a bad snowstorm that the Germans couldn't imagine anybody fighting in that blizzard and were unprepared.

Well, live and learn. The Heinies will know a lot more before this fracas ends. That is, those who survive.

"Be ashamed to die," wrote Horace Mann, the great educator, "until you have won some great victory for humanity." That is what our brave men are doing who have given their lives for freedom.

Inside WASHINGTON

10 Million Slave Workers Battle Over Butter Looms Now Nightmare for Nazis Between Two War Agencies
Special to Central Press
WASHINGTON—Military circles are not discounting the potential effectiveness of a mass movement of Hitler's enslaved 10 million peoples inside Germany—despite the Gestapo's tight grip, supervised by Heinrich Himmler, over the entire Third Reich.
Some observers believe that two recent events in Germany were aimed directly at possible rebellion by Hitler's hostages. These were Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler's appearance in place of Hitler, and the creation of the nationwide Volksturm (people's army).
With the Gestapo firmly entrenched, it is believed the Volksturm—whose members were ordered to shoulder weapons assigned to them for defense of the homeland—may be used to quell any disturbance by the huge alien force now held captive inside Germany.
Allied military commanders are non-committal on the subject, but some quarters recall Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's instructions to the French underground to await the message to rise against the Nazi foe.
The French situation leads some military experts to wonder just what plans are under way to utilize the labor prison population in Germany now that the Allied big push on Berlin is under way.
A KNOCK-DOWN, DRAG OUT FIGHT is looming between WFA and OPA on butter—one of the more short of the "shortage" food items.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—There is no use in trying to deny that much of business swallowed its hopes hard last election day.

A quiet pessimism in those ranks has been evident since then, one nationally known corporation head expressed a widespread viewpoint when he said:

"We have accumulated reserves and if Dewey had won we would have spent these in expectation of post-war expansion; now we will save them for taxes and eventualities which may be imposed upon us."

Openly the big record-making companies (CBS and RCA) threw up their hands and granted Petrillo of the Musicians Union a bounty up to five cents each on the sale of every record for no good reason except that the government had failed to bring Petrillo to terms in a long strike.

The musicians do not need the money and Petrillo has only promised he will expend it to further the appreciation of music. The public, of course, will pay it, as usual.

A wave of strikes and greatly increased wage demands are expected by all after victory in Europe has relieved somewhat the patriotic pressure upon the unions, etc., etc.

But there is another side of the story, not being told. This country always has run to extremes. Thirty years ago it was dominated by selfish financial cliques without any sense of social responsibility or the good of the nation or its people.

They got theirs in 1929. They got it because they became too big, took in too much territory. Men never seem to know how to use power wisely.

The fascist movement in Germany and Italy would today be strong had it not taken in too much territory. Napoleon committed the same error. History is unanimous with evident proofs that those who feed on power always commit suicide by their unwise excesses.

The unions are now at the crossroads. Obviously they must change from the Petrillo attitude (radical czarist leadership) so prevalent among them or they will kill themselves. Their tendency to dominate the whole policy of the country in the past few years cannot continue indefinitely without building up a public resentment which will engulf them, and no doubt lead to the opposite extreme.

Some wise men I know, give them another year at most on their present line. I think the time depends on how they are led. But their bankroll is getting too big, the messes on their hands are increasing, their power is growing too great.

I think therefore, there is more than an even chance that events will mitigate current fears in this respect, a far better chance than the obvious one indicating they will increase wages continuously to the point of devastating inflation, ruin business and cause socialism, which is no doubt the goal of communists in their ranks.

So also with the fear of the great war debt which hangs over us. This country has the stuff with which to make good. It has manpower, resources, production and efficiency beyond any other nation.

An individual in debt can always borrow money if his chances for successes are measured good. His chances of success is the real gauge of his worth, not the amount of debt he carries.

So also with nations. Their soundness will be measured by their prospects.

If we do not become too soft after the war, we can become a great trading nation. If we are skillful in developing foreign (Continued on Page Eight)

The Weaker Sex

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

"WOMEN AND MEN" is the name of a new book by Amram Scheinfeld (published by Harcourt, Brace and Company, New York). It reviews in a completely scientific spirit such questions as whether women are superior to men or vice versa, why men have dominated women, just how different boys and girls are and such like disputatious subjects. It goes without saying that if you happen to be either a man or a woman it is interesting.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Men or vice versa, why men have dominated women, just how different boys and girls are and such like disputatious subjects. It goes without saying that if you happen to be either a man or a woman it is interesting.

"No fact about you is more important than your sex," is the way it starts out. Most of us have probably wondered what kind of people we would have been if we had been of the opposite sex.

Women live longer than men. A white infant at birth in 1942 could look forward to 68 years if a woman, 63 years if a man.

Women More Moral

Women are more moral than men. At least in a one year period 60,000 men were sent to Federal or State prisons or reformatories, and 2,600 men committed suicide, 4,400 women.

As to comparative intelligence, you have to name the sphere of operation.

In clerical work of any kind women are far and away superior to men. Among a group of high school freshmen 50 per cent of the girls achieved scores of high rating, achieved by 15 per cent of the boys. In general on such tests the girls do 10 to 30 per cent better than the boys.

On mechanical comprehension, however, the boys and men far outshine the women. Shown the picture of a machine and asked to explain it 70 per cent of the men do so correctly in a given time and 33 per cent of the women.

Other Comparisons

There are practically no women comic strip artists, gag writers, radio announcers or editorial writers.

"Women rarely get the hang of mass comedy technique. Their

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

"What of the Frederic Miller checks?" queried Nicky. There was another silence. Then Alexia said in a kind of stifled way, "All right. But if you say a word..."

"You took them out of my desk yourself, didn't you?" "Nicky, is this a guess or do you know?" "I know enough. I think I know the whole story."

"You don't," protested Alexia. "You can't possibly. But if you'll keep still..." "I knew you'd see the light. It's a deal: Dollar for dollar. Fifty-fifty. It's a good thing that you are a sensible girl..."

"Will you go?" demanded Alexia in a voice that trembled with rage. "Right," said Nicky and someone tiptoed from the house. So Nicky knew, or pretended to know, the "whole story." Whatever it was, it was so incriminating that Alexia would promise half her legacy to silence him.

After a long silence in the cottage, I moved, very cautiously, so I could see through the little crack between curtain and window casing. Then I wished I hadn't looked. For Nicky stood in the doorway; he was looking slowly around the study, and he held the long carving knife in one hand.

Only it wasn't Nicky! I looked closer, scrutinizing. It was Alexia in Nicky's clothes—his checked jacket, brown slacks, maroon scarf. It must be Alexia; Nicky had gone.

All at once I understood many things. Mainly, Nugent's suggestion was right: Alexia could and obviously had worn Nicky's clothes whenever it was convenient to do so. But there was something else—something terribly important. Oh, yes, is Drue here? Nicky had asked.

If Drue were in that gloomy silent cottage she was upstairs where I hadn't looked. Perhaps they had her locked up. Just then I was watching Alexia, and afraid for fear she would feel my eyes upon her. But she didn't, for she was looking at the books I had left on the desk. No: that was wrong. She was actually looking at the telephone.

Suddenly Alexia took one swift step to the telephone, and slashed through its wire with the knife. Then she glanced around the study again and I shut my eyes to keep from attracting her gaze. When I opened them an instant later, she was gone.

I crept out from behind the draperies. Then I flashed through my mind that nobody would live isolated in the country, without a revolver, and my hand went out to the desk drawer, opened it cautiously, and there was actually a revolver lying on top of some papers.

The hall was in blackness as I groped with my free hand for the stairs. Suddenly my hand encountered hair. Human hair!

I drew back quickly. I would have fired the revolver if I had not been scared stiff. Then I realized that the hair I touched was a braid. It was Anna's, and she was alive.

In fact, Anna was shrinking over the banisters, away from me. She was petrified with fright, and I got my hand over her mouth before she even whimpered. I whispered sternly, "Anna, it's me—the nurse, Miss Keate..."

"Oo—woo—woo—" she moaned. "She pulled away from me, sucked in a great gulp of air while I sought desperately for her mouth in the darkness, and then she whispered, 'Turn me over to the police. It's all my fault.'"

I said between my teeth, "Is Miss Cable here?" "Oh, yes, yes. She's not hurt, she's upstairs, in a bedroom."

"You've got to go for the police! Quick! Out the back door!" "Police?" "They won't hurt you. Be quiet. Hurry!"

"No, no! I lied to them! I said I didn't telephone the night Mr. Brent was killed. But I did. I knew it was murder. I was afraid something terrible would happen. And it did."

"You telephoned the police!" "Yes. Yes. Oh, Nurse, I've been so wicked. I picked up the vase. I had to; I was made to do it; I didn't want to."

"Who made you pick up the broken vase? Why did you know it was murder?" Anna... "But I was so vehement. I had her by the shoulders and I clutched too hard. I only frightened her into a gibbering, quaking, sobbing jelly. I couldn't get another sensible or coherent two words out of her."

And Drue was alone, with Alexia somewhere in the house. So finally I showed the revolver against Anna's neck where she could feel the cold steel. "Go out the back door," I ordered. "Go through the kitchen. Don't make a sound. And if you don't bring the police back here as soon as you can I'll shoot you!"

I must have impressed her; something penetrated the fog of terror around her. "I will—oh, I will—it's all my fault. But don't shoot!" she quavered out of the darkness.

Anna groped her way around me and I could hear the soft patter of her feet for a few steps... I couldn't hear anything at all from upstairs or from the front of the house, but presently I did hear the soft opening and closing of a door nearby and I was reasonably sure it was Anna. But I wasn't at all sure she would go for the police.

I took a harder grip on the revolver and started up the narrow flight of stairs. I came to a landing and poked my head cautiously around the corner to look along a narrow hall, going toward the front of the house, with doors opening from it.

I didn't know where Drue was, so I must try the rooms. Drue was in the first bedroom I entered. I didn't see her at first; she had heard or sensed my approach and had shrunk back behind the door. As I turned she caught a glimpse of me. "Sarah..." "Sh—sh," I closed the door softly. Her face was a white oval in the dusk; her hands gripped my arms as if she would never let me go. "Sarah," she whispered.

"Be still, Alexia's here. Nicky was here, but I think he's gone. Drue, are you all right? Did they hurt—?" "No, no. Only I couldn't do anything. She wouldn't let me..." "Anna. She's gone now to fix us something to eat. A few minutes ago. I thought I heard Nicky's voice."

"You did." I was sure she was all right; and relief surged along my nerves. I couldn't think of anything except to get Drue out of there. And the notes about digitalis into the hands of the police. And Anna's words and Alexia's into their ears!

I wasn't really afraid of Alexia; not with Drue, to say nothing of the revolver, to back me up. Neither Drue nor myself was exactly frail and, moreover, as nurses we'd had a certain amount of training in self-defense.

Drue was still clinging to me. "Drue..." she whispered. "Is he...?" "Nearly crazy," I said while listening for Alexia. "He—listen, Drue, when you left the Brent house (I mean when you were married to Craig and he was in Washington) did Nicky go with you?"

"Yes, yes. He drove me to the station. Then he took the same train to New York; he said he had some business in town. Why?" So that settled that, I thought rather grimly. Then I said wearily, "Tell Craig that." "Tell Craig? But Nicky—that was nothing!" "Sh—sh," I said quickly, certain I heard some motion outside, but the door did not open and there was no further sound. After a moment I whispered, "Anna went for the police. At least, I sent her to get them."

"Anna!" Drue shuddered. I said, "She made you come here. What did she tell you?" "Anna told me she knew something. Last night she came to me—" "I know. The guard told us."

"She was crazy with fear. Really, Sarah, she was afraid of everything. She promised to tell me what she knew if I'd help her get away from the house. She was afraid to talk there, in the house. Terrified."

"So you came here?" "In the night, Anna said this house was empty and no one would look for us here. I wasn't afraid, not at first."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE MARK OF AN EXPERT
WILLIE HOPPE, the great billiard champion, once said there's no such thing as an easy shot. He explained that if you loafed and failed to concentrate, you might miss any shot, no matter how simple. That could be paraphrased in bridge by saying there's no such thing as an unimportant card. One mark of an expert is his intension in noting the exact size of every card played. Even the difference between a deuce and a trey can sometimes point the way to successful play.

South explained later that his passing of the 4-Diamonds was because he thought North's bidding showed five hearts, four clubs and four diamonds, whereas North meant to be cue-bidding and asking his partner's clam desire if North showed him control of the first round of the two minors and therefore inferentially control of the top rounds of hearts. would have meant a licking for North. With the bidding lessons possible from this hand, who would also expect a keen point of play in it? East led the club K to the A. three hearts following and the spade 10 being sent through to the K. The club J came back to the Q, followed by the 10, giving the defenders their book, whereupon East led the K of the diamonds which West had doubled. North ruffed and led the spade 9. When he came up with the dummy's A, dropping the Q, he was able to make his contract.

West wondered how North decided the spade Q could be dropped, instead of having it win the setting trick on a finesse. To North it was quite simple. He noticed East put the 2 on the first spade lead and the 3 on the next, indicating probable possession of three cards. His other spade could be either the Q or the 5. North decided West was more likely to have any single outstanding card, because at that stage he held one more card than East, so he played his A to catch it.

IT IS ALWAYS difficult to find an appropriate gift for the shut-in or the invalid. The persons to whom Christmas may mean nothing if their friends neglect them may be remembered by a gift of fruit. The Clarence Wolf grocery has a complete line of all fresh seasonal fruits and will be glad to help select and fill a gift basket or box.

SUGAR AND SPICE and everything nice goes into the making of the fruit cakes that are for sale this year at Wallace's Bakery. They are made in one, two and three pound cakes. CERTAINLY many of our toys are not pre-war grade but how can they be? Steel axles can't be put on play wagons, metal barrels may not be put on play guns nor soft resilient kapok may not be used for stuffing a cuddly little animal or doll. These articles have gone to war and are precious priority materials for the duration. But we have gathered the best substitutes in the toy market for the children of this locality. We know that they will not mind helping make another Christmas happier for everybody by the substitution of these toys for the more sturdy ones. Harper & Yost Hardware.

ONE of the very real pleasures of life—a chenille house coat to reflect your dreamy holiday mood. They are all featured at the W. T. Grant company and are in bright colors to give you the lift you will want. Full length and fitted around the waist with shawl collars. Ties of the same material. You will want these house coats when you see them. They also make ideal gifts.

WHEN BLUE SMOKE spirals to the skies from millions of fires and chairs are drawn forward the long many legs stretched to the open fire will be wearing interwoven socks in most cases. They are the best known and most appreciated gift that any man can receive. Caddy Miller's hat shop has a full line of them. Sizes are complete and the quality is guaranteed to be pre-war. Be sure to buy your man's gift at a man's store.

NO HOUSEKEEPER ever had too many small throw rugs. Therefore a gift of one of these would always please. The pretty rag rugs our grandparents used are now coming back to their own and mothers of small children find them a boon to good housekeeping. They are easily washed and very inexpensive. See them and others at Griffith and Mart.

SCIOTO TRAIL BEAGLE CLUB TO SPONSOR TRIAL
